Join us for the Idaho Range Livestock Symposium 2023!

This year's Symposium is coming to three locations across southern Idaho with a virtual option on 1/11. This annual event is packed with industry-relevant information for agricultural producers and land managers. Speakers will share the newest information and research on issues including:

- Research on E.coli in rangeland streams
- Green energy challenges for rangeland management
- Strategies for managing high feed and production costs
- New virtual fencing technologies for western range
- Herd health issues & more!

Registration is free, and includes lunch at in-person events. For registration and more information, visit uidaho.edu/rangesymposium
